BATTIES OF MARLINS BOTTOM AND HUNTERSVILLE

There use to be a covered bridge at Marlins Bottom (Marlinton) across the Greenbrier River. This was one of the bridges that came through the Civil War. Armies marched back and forth over this bridge and it figured in battles and retreats, but as it happened, never but once was an attempt made to destroy it an that time Mrs. Margaret Poogs Price was able to scatter the fire. That was during Averill's raid.

Years after the war, Andrew Price saw an old Confederate soldier, James Schisler of Greenbrier County examining the walls of the bridge. He said that he was looking for the loopholes he had used during the war.

So fer as is known there was but one time that they had a battle near Marlins Bottom, though it was for months a fortified camp. The local people on either side did not understand what the controversy was about. All they knew was that there were soldiers stationed at the bridge and anddenly the bottom was full of blue coats, and that there was much firing and cavalry charging, that the confederates retreated and the Yankees went away.

Dr. George B. Moffett in telling about it afterwards said, " Well, I thought I had a fairly fleet horse, but with all those bullets flying around me, it seemed like Gizzard not run at all."

The day clat the Yankees and Confederates sowed the bottom with minnie balls was

This building is still standing and was a few years ago made into a real transfer.

At Buttonsville that winter the 25th Ohio was camped and with them was Major George sebter. General Milroy was in command of the forces and conceived a plan to let Major sebter have a chance to lead a small army into the Greenbrier Valley by way of Old Field rath of Elk River to Marlins Bottom. It having been about two weeks since he had found the upper road blockedst Top Allegheney.

webster entered upon his campaign with enthusiasm and he executed orders with neatness and dispatch. His little army was made up of 400 soldiers from his own regiment.
They marched by the Elkwater fort and there he picked up 300 men from the Second West Virginia, and at Linwood he was joined by 38 of Brecken's Cavalrymen. He had loaded up his supply wagons and the army of 738 men moved south into the country of the enemy. He left Euttonsville December 31, 1861. On the evening of Jan. 2, 1862 he reached the place where the Crooked Fork of Elk turns to encircle the upper branch of the Gauley R. There they found the timber barricede cut into the narrow defile the fell before when Lee's army withdrew from the waters of the Elk to the waters of the Greenbrier. The trees were all cut for more than a mile. It was impossible to get his wagons through without losing too much time, so he left them there with fifty men to guard them. He took the path to the left on J.C. Gay's side of the blockade and he climbed the mountain early in the morning of Jan.
2, 1861.

Then Webster got to the top of Elk Mountain on the Gay place he could look down the valley of the Greenbrier and see the tents of the company who had started to winter on the light Fatch, that part of Marlinton now ofcupied by the Union Tanning Co. Another company (Loislana) was camped down the river on the west side where the old Price Place is.

Marilias Bottom was fortified against invasion from the north. The old road came up a little till and dropped down to the bridge head. On top of this hill was a cannon. A part this set can still be seen. On the east of the river on the bank was a trench of the fire satisfied the length of what is now the Tannery Row of tenement houses, with still styled where the road topped the bank from the Marlin ford. rick, he stopped long enough to sent a squad of cavalry across the river, and they galloped the the east bank of the river and to the Huntersville road firing and acting outrageous testiract attention while Websters infantry came on down the west of the road. The cavalry coming in behind the Confederates caused them to stampede. Most of them made across the bridge to the west and fled into the woods. This engagement while a very noisy one resulted in no loss by death or wounding on either side. All they lost was their wind. It hardly halted the advance of the Federals. They crossed the bridge and advanced on to Huntersville driving before them some mounted Confederates. Huntersville had seen some big armies during the year of 1861, and when Lee left everything in charge of Loring, the Confederates and Huntersville their headquarters for all their activities in this part of the country.

Webster had left Captain Johnson with 50 men to guard the wagons at the barricade on Elks. Now he left Captain Williams with 50 men to guard Greenbrier Bridge.

Then Webster arrived at the ford of Knopps Creek, near the home of Joe H. Buzzard, he found the Confederate cavalry on the south side of the creek in a level field, their line extending up and over a hilly spur that jutted out into the field. Webster sent a detachment up the mountain to turn the confederate's right while the rest of his command marched upon their front and firing became general on both sides. But the confederates seeing that the federals were encircling them fell back and formed a new line of battle on Cummings Creek near Huntersville. The picket coming in from Marlins Bottom had reported the Federal forces to be about 5000 men.

Tebster crossed the creek at Buzzards, topped the little spur and finding that the Confederates were in battle line on Cummings Creek sent two companies to his right through the woods, and the Brocken Cavalry to the left toward the creek. The rest of the troops eigened forward. After some firing the Confederates mounted their horses and retreated to the town. As the Federals entered Huntersville the Federals entered Huntersville on the west side the Confederates left by the east side. When Webster marched into Huntersville is found it described. Not a soul was living there. The courthouse, jail, stores and houses all recent. Was had come too close to them, and the county seat and largest town was all recent. Was had come too close to them, and the county for most of the war, and the weighted was the Freebylerian church for a samp, and the houses were abused. Windows

the scene of so much social life and gayety became one of the dreariest sights he had ever

The people had abandoned the town because they had been told by the Confederates that if they were beaten the Federals would burn the town. When the town was captured Jan 3, 1862, large stores of army supplies were found stored there. There were 350 barrels of flour, 150,000 pounds of beef, 30,000 pounds of salt and large quantities of sugar, coffee, rice, bacon and clothing. Not being able to move anything fire was set to the stores and they were destroyed. The Confederates had fallen back to Monterey Va. The Federal loss was one man shot in the arm. The Confederates loss was one man killed and 7 wounded. The number of Confederates engaged was about 400 regular cavalrymen, and several hundred cities recruited the day before, and two companies of infantry. In the meantime, at Camp Baldwin on the Allegheney, Gen. Edward Johnson was filled with apprehension. His scouts had reported the forward movement of the Federals to be about 5,000 men and Johnson thought they would circle around by Huntersville, Frost, and Crab Bottom and attack him from his base at Monterey.

But having destroyed the confederate supplies at Huntersville Webster turned and marched his men back to his wagons that night in the driving rain, having fought two engagements and marched something like 28 miles on foot. That was a big days work. It took one and one-half hours to drive the Confederates a mile, and he was in Huntersville two hours destroying supplies.

It was no wonder the local people did not understand the movements for even the Confederate commanders did not know what was happening to them. Websters return from Hunteraville was what they had not counted on. They went on the basis that a big army was the move, and expected it to march on to White Sulphur, Millboro, or Monterey. But the little Federal army marching so jaunty with their yound commander had no notion of penetrating farther into the strongholds of the Confederates than any Union army had reached up to that time. Webster had swept the country clean as he went along, and had extricated his army with such neatness and dispatch.

On Jan. 5, 1862 they were book in their old headquarters at Muttonsville. It was an fire a campaign as ever a set of youngsters put over. Webster was there and back again all his men and horses intect, having carried fire and sword into a hostile country, as a serched 106 miles in six days.

He threw a scare into the Confederates that made their lines quiver from Huntersville to Winchester and from Top Allegheney to Staunton.

Scouts rode headlong in every direction corrying dispatches. They seem to have agreed on the strength of the Federal army as being 5,000 men instead of the 738 that it actually was.

Pattle of Top Allegheny Dec. 13, 1861.

The battle of Top Allegheney was fought in Pocahontas county on Pecember 13, 1861 between the forces of the Union under General R. H. Wilroy, and the forces of the confederates under General W. W. Loring. Col. Edward Johnson commanding.

The two companies had camped within sight of each other since July 13, 1861 the day the Federals had occupied Whites Top of Cheat. For five months they had watched each others camp fires rise. During this five months they had fought the battle at Travelers Repose on Oct. 3 and had also had another skermish at this same place on Oct. 31, 1861. Both times the Federals had been driven back to their camp on Cheat Nountain.

There had been other minor skermishes throughout the summer and Autumn. The Federal camp was known officially as Camp Cheat Mountain Summit. The Confederate camp was known as Camp Baldwin, in honor of a confederate soldier of that name. Between these two camps was Camp Fartow at Travelers Repose. The Confederates had made a winter camp on top Allegheney Montain by erecting log cabins.

As you go along the road now you can see piles of stone at regular intervals which represent the chimneys of the cabins. You can see the trenches and fortifications on Allegheney also at Cheat and Eartow. The top of Allegheney is a wind-swept pasture land, and the pike lies for some miles through this level table-land. In making the attack, the Poderals had to climb up the side of the mountain and fight on the top of this table-land.

The advance on December 12th found Camp Bartow at Travelers Repose deserted, but theyor D. E. Ross of the 52nd Virginian had been dispatched to that point with 106 man to form an anhuscade on the read between Eurbin and Bartow.

When the Federals came up, Ross and his men fired on them and killed 10 and wounded a number of others. The Federals advanced in great force and Ross was forced to retreat. He reached Camp Baldwin that night.

Ambrose Bierce was with the Federals. He says they marched all day down Cheat Mountain and all nigh up Allegheney Mountain. That the firing at the foot of the mountain haolted them for a time, but after the Confederates retreated they reached Travelers Repose. There they divided. About half of them marched down the road toward Greenbank and turned at the Urish Heavener farm and climbed the road that is still used as a short cut between Saulsbury Run and Buffalo Run. The other half continued up the pike.

As the battle was scheduled to begin before day break those killed at Bartow were not buried but laid on the upper side of the road and covered with blankets. As the soldiers passed that way many of them stopped to see if they could recognize a friend among the dead.

The next day as they returned from the battle ground defeated and approached the place where the dead lay it seemed they had moved and cast aside their covering. But upon investigation they found a drove of hogs had been at the bodies and eaten the faces off the dead.

The hogs were killed and the dead buried. This scene is described in legacolastic Memories of the Civil War-Ambrose Bierce.

When the turnpike gets to within a mile of the top of this mountain, it makes a sharp turn to the south and from there it climbs gently to the top where it passes a church. The Federal army lift the pike at this curve and climbed directly up the hillside hoping to get behind the camp. But there were pickets out and the camp was alarmed by their shots around 6 c'clock that morning. The Confederates marched several companies out to meet the Federals as they came of the top. The Federals waited in the came of the forest until near daylight and then marched into the open field and then the firing became general.

The Confederate line swung back and forward, and at one stage of the battle their right flank was driven to take shelter in their log cabins. There was fighting all over the top until mid afternoon, The half of the army which had swung to the south and was advancing up the crest of Buffalo Ridge failed in its purpose of surprising the camp. On that side of the camp there were trenches prepared to guard both roads and there was also some good artillery.

These trenches were full of soldiers prepared for an emergency.

However, when the Federals first appeared, Captain Anderson of the Lee Eattery thought it was a band of pickets being driven in. He sprang upon the side of the trench and called to them to hurry up and get in to the trenches. He was instantly shot and killed.

Finally about mid afternoon a retreat was sounded and the Federal army made its way back to camp Cheat Mountain. The Confederates reported that 1,200 Confederates had repulsed an army of 5000 men. That it was a great battle and a great victory.

The Federals reported that they had 1,760 men and the Confederates had 2,500, and that it was a recommaissance in force. J. P. Benjamin, Sec. of war, wrote that Presdent Jefferson Davis having been informed of the valor of Col. Edward Johnson in repulsing a vastly superior force was much gratified at the news of success, and had made him a brigadier general.

The losses of the battle were: Federal-dead 20, wounded 107, missing 10, total 137.

Confederate- dead 20, wounded 98, missing 28, total 146. After this lettle the troops wentinto winter quarters, and there was no more fighting on the Staumton and Parkersburg turnpike that winter.

From - W. Va. Blue Book 1928 By, Andrew Price.

According to the old timers who have heard relatives tell about their vinter in comp on the Allegheney, they were about to starve.

Boy McPaters says he has heard his uncle J. Martin tell how they went out once and killed a sheep belonging to a near by farmer. That they were so hungry that they ate it when only half cooked and then fought over the skin. At another time they broke into a cellar where a woman had her ox hid. They out its throat and took the meat back to camp.

Ambrose Bierce tells of hunting bear on Cheat Mountain when the snow was up to his arms. Whether he hunted for pleasure or to obtain food I do not know. Also I've been told by Lee Ervin, who had several uncles from Bath Co. in Camp Baldwin, that the reason they were so well prepared to repulse this Federal army was because they could see them as they marched down Back Allegheney and knew they were coming for an attack. Therefore, had all in readiness.

POCAHONTAS COUNTY

BATTLES OF MILL POINT AND

DROOP MOUNTAIN

In Nevember 1863 there were no Confederate forces of any size anywhere in Rest Virginia except in the Greenbrier Valley. That was held by the Confederates from its head to its foot, some 170 miles, by between four and five thousand soldiers, protecting Virginia from attack from the west.

General Kelly, in command of the department of West Virginia, gave orders to welleral averill at Beverly and General Duffie at Gauley bridge to send armies to meet at Lewisburg and drive the Confederates out of the Greenbrier Valley.

Averill care into Pocahontas by the Staunton and Parkersburg Turnpike and turned so that at Travelers Repose. At that time the Confederate troops were stationed as follows: At Glade Hill in the upper part of the county was Captain W. L. McNeel's Co., At Edray, Captain J. W. Marshall was in charge of a detachment watching the Marlins Estton and Euttonsville Turnpike; Col. W. W. Arnett had a regiment at Marlins Bottom in confortable log houses getting ready to winter there; Colonel W. L. Jackson had the main part of his regiment the 19th Virginia Cavalry at Mill Point; Col. arnett got his men out of Marlins Bottom by the skin of his teeth as it was. He sent a horse soldier (cavalryman) to tell Captain Marshall at Edray that he was coing to barricade the road on Price Hill, and for him to march the back way and come to the road on top of Frice Hill. Arnett cut a lot of trees across the Price Hill road and dug some of the road away on that sliding hillside. The exciting days for this county were Wednesday, Nov. 4, Thursday Nov. 5th; and Friday Nov. 6, 1863.

Then it was that the biggest battle ever fought in Pocahontas occurred. Arnett left larlies Bottom at sun down on Wednesday and Col. Ohley moved into his deserted log cabins at dusk.

There was only one road between Marlins Bottom and Mill Point, and Averill with his army at Huntersville had laid a plan to capture Arnett's forces by sending Ohley down the rike to get Arnett started south while Col. Harris moved his forces down leaver Creek to get shead of him and block the road at harvin Chapel where the two reass white. Inis plan would have succeeded but for Col. W. P. Thompson who had been recalled from told Knob with his cavalry and was unsaddling at his old camp on the first S. Kellison farm when Jackson's courier rode up and told him to hold the Beaver freed. Thompson immediately went to Beaver Creek, and spent the evening cutting trees across the road. He fell back firing as he went. This delayed the Federal Thursday Nov. 5, 1863, was Mill Point day. Mill Point has never been given the credit for the bartism by fire that she had that day because what occurred next day at Droop Fountain, five miles south, has overshadowed it to such a great extent.

There was enough powder burned that day at Mill Point to fight a great battle. The Federal armies were at Stephen Hale Run and on the hill between that run and Mill Feint. The Confederates formed a battle line along the banks of Stamping Creek for a rile or rore, and their artillery was on the hill just south of Mill Point. When then gime began to thunder it occurred to Jackson that his battle line was just the right distance from the Federal batteries to be in range of grape shot and he withdrew his arm by having them slip silently up the stream until they were hid by the bend of the number, and he took them out by the flint pits near Tom Beards. Having gotten his treets under way, he looked up to the long smooth summit of broop Mountain and decided to lake ris stand there. By nightfall he was in camp on the crest looking down on the

it in eleven hours. These mountain men marched 56 miles in 42 hours, and had wasted 7 hours fighting a battle. They never even hesitated when they reached Lewisburg for Duffie was due there that morning.

on friday morning Nov. 6, 1863 Echols, Arnett and Marshall also Jackson and Instrson, Echols commanding, with an army of around 5000 soldiers were encamped at the foot of the mountain. He was in plain sight of the Confederates on the mountain and it was impossible to march up the mountain and attack from the front without being seen. Therefore, he sent Col. Augustus Moore, of the 28th Ohio Regiment, and Col.

7. M. Harris, of the 10th West Virginia, to make a flanking movement and attack the Confederates from the rear. Averill made gestures of attack from the front while locre and Earris with about 1000 soldiers went over the mountain and through the vects to attack in the rear.

Test of us have grown up with the idea that the Confederates neglected to guard their left flank and that they were taken by surprise, but a study of the official dispatches on both sides do not bear out that theory. It seems that no less than four detachments were sent against this attack and that they fought a long and bloody lettle for about a mile through the thick forest and underbrush on top of the lettle for about a mile through the thick forest and underbrush on top of the lettle for a latest is more, instead of being surprised by the flanking movement, and that is more fired the first shot. Averall marched up the mountain from the front when he detected the fighting in the rear. When his men reached the top of the mountain the Confederate forces true and ran. The Federals fought a stern chase battle with them for hours.

Those who have made a study of troop movements which culminated in the Battle of Droop Mountain say that General Echols had no time to stay and fight it out with Averil: when he knew another Union army was coming to cut off his rear by way of Lealance. The federal force was composed of the 14th Pennsylvania Unfantry, 23rd and 24th Ohio Infantry, the 5th, 6th, and 10th, West Virginia Infantry, and one battery of Artillery. This force had been stationed at Beverly in Randolph County. The federal force was under command of General W. W. Averell.

The movement of the two armies preceding this battle have been traced by competent authority to have been as follows: In the first week in November, 1863, General Averell ordered General Duffie to meet him him at 2 p. m., November 7th, at Lewisburg, and Duffie marched from Kanawha, 120 miles. Averell marched from Beverly and had 110 miles to go. Averell reached Lewisburg on Saturday November 7th, at 2 p. m., and found that Duffie had got there at 10 a.m.

Averell left Beverly on Sunday and came over Cheat mountain by way of Cheat Bridge and marched by Camp Bartow, where they left the Staunton & Farkersburg Turnpike and took the road leading by Greenbank to Huntersville.

They reached Huntersville on Wednesday at noon, and there Averell mark that Colin. Re Thompson, with the 19th Virginia Cavalry, was at larlins bottom, at the Greenbrier Brioge. The fattery was placed on the left of the pike between Hillsboro the foot of Droop Mountain. Gibson's Battallion and the 10th sest virginia were held in or near Hillsboro on the pike. The 2nd, 3rd, and 8th, West Virginia Regiments were placed to the right of the pike from the Renick place, out of sight of the Confederates on top of the countain. The 28th Ohio Volunteer Infantry and one company of the 14th, remsylvania, in all 1175 when, were sent by the long nine mile detour to the right by Lobelia, and while they started long before daylight they did not reach the battle field until 1:45 p.m. In the meantime a great deal of cannon firing had been going on.

About nine o'clock, the Confederates announced by cheers and by benk music, and by the display of flags, that Major General Echols had brought his army up. This must have caused Averell some apprehension considering the position he held with the Confederates holding the muntain top. He had not attacked the day before for good and sufficient reason. We shall see later how he won on this day with the odds against aim.

Chapter 4 - Dection 4 - Incidents in Battle of Droop Mountain.

The proof Pountain Sattlefield Commission has tried to mark the position of the different units and by actual survey and measurements, that the markers which they have planted and the maps which they have prepared, may be a sure guide to the public, and the descendants of the soldiers that fought the battle, and point to the very spot where their fathers stood in the greatest battle ever fought on mest Virginia soil.

Milton Butcher, who was Jackson's courier, carried the last order that his chief gave. The order was to Col. Lerrick, and read, "Fall back to pike, west of artillery." He delivered the dispatch but his horse was killed and he was captured, but made his escape.

Lajor Nester, who commanded the 46th Batallion was in the 28th Ohio. He stopped their advance and they were the control of the 28th Ohio. Their Captain was in prison and the First lieutenant was on staff duty, and the company had but one commanding officer, Lieutenant Henry Bender. John D. Baxter, the orderly sergeant was in advance of the company. At this point our chairman saw the condition of the company and went up to Baxter and requested him to get back and help line up the company. To this request Baxter never replied but ran up and ricked two or three rails off the fence and they both jumped over and Baxter received a mortal wound. W. F. Morrison, T. M. Barnett and John A. Blagg we believe were the next to cross the fence, and while crossing Blagg was badly wounded and Barnett had a leg shot off. Morrison escaped unharmed. storge . Morrison, Silas Carr and M. D. Shaver were the next of Jompany F to cross the rail fence. This occurred near the close of the battle. No braver man than J. D. Baxter ever etgoised a cause or went to war. A few minutes later Major selley of the 22nd Virginia was mortally wounded, while trying to relay his men to make another stand. He was an officer and : .. Her of daring and courage.

soldier, and took hold of his body to remove him to the place were they were bringing the dead and wounded soldiers. He felt a crooked finger on the dead soldier's hand, and the size and feel of the man convinced Short that he was his brother, John. He, therefore, called for someone to bring a light, saying that he had found his brother, and when he had the light, he i found for a certainty that it was his brother.

the dead looking intently into the faces of each dead Confederate soldier. On being asked what she was looking for she said, "I am looking for George". She was the guest at the more of Colonel McNeill. She had recently married and was the wife of Captain George I. Davisson of Lewis County. George had gone through the battle unharmed and was far from the scene of conflict when his wife was looking among the dead.

while every battle has its tragedies, yet in most every tattle there is some amusing incident. James Sisler was Columbication's brigadier quartermaster, and had charge of the trains of ordinance supplies. He recently related that at the close of the battle when they were on the retreat and in great confision, he read up to Colonel wackson and asked him what he with the wagon train, and wackson said, "Damned if I is a later and that he then ordered the teamsters to the team of the teamsters to the confision that the team of the Lewisburg pike. wagon became frightened, and whitled around, breaking the tongue off the wagon. They then put some fence rails on the wagon to set it on fire, and he said for several years after, the war, people would come to gather up scattered lead over the fields.

Infantry, is authority for the story illustrating the coolness of Colonel Harris in battle and under heavy fire. While Colonel Harris was leading his regiment into position for the final charge at Droop Mountain, he passed to a section so rough that he had dismounted and was leading his horse. A bullet from the Coniederate lines passed through the long, red beard then worn by the Colonel, cutting out a wisp. He stripped out the severed whiskers and as he dropped them to the ground, turned to Adjutant John Warnicke and said, "John, take my horse back to the rear; I'm afraid he'll get shot." Then he continued to lead the charge on foot.

Prior to the Battle of Droop Mountain there were no considerable Confederate forces anywhere in West Virginia except in the Greenbrier Valley, which was held by the Confederates from its head to its foot, a distance of about one hundred seventy miles, and which protected Virginia from attacks from the west. For the purpose of dislodging these Confederate forces, General Averell was directed to march from Beverly, West Virginia, to lewisburg and it was while on the march that he met the enemy at Proop Mountain. The battle was there fought on the 6th day of November, 1863, between the forces commanded by General Averell, and the Confederate forces by General John Echols and Colones William L. Jackson.

At a distance, it would look like common consent that the forces were to be assembled for a final test of strength. General Averell, with a very formidable force, left Beverly on how. 1st, to find the enemy and give battle wherever he might be found. General WM. L. Jackson, commanding a brigade and several other units, battalions and companies, was joined by General Echols on the morning of the 6th, by a splended brigade of fighting men. General Averell encountered the Confederates in force at Mill Point on the morning of the 5th, and drove them to the foot of Droop Mountain, and there camped for the night. On the morning of the 6th, General Averell threw out a strong skirmish line that cleared his front to the foot of the mountain. About 9 A. M. the 10th .. 76. Inft., 28th Ohio Inft., and one company of the 14th is. -av. and two pieces of Ewing's Battery were sent ar-2.54 on a back road six and one-half miles where they formed, tid struck the enemy in force. Here is where the principal the hardest part of the batile was fought, and in passing ever one small plot of cleared land, not comprising more than One sere, thirteen were killed and forty-seven were wounded. . Ore of those wounded died later, so if this hattlefield govering nearly two thatsand acres of land and fought on by seven thousand determined soldiers, what would the casualty list have been, if the land had been cleared. Averell then formed the 2nd, 3rd, and 8th West Va. Mounted Infantry, with a portion of the 14th Pa. Cavalry in line of battle, who succeeded in driving the Confederate forces, composed of the 22nd Virginia Inft. and 19th Va. Cav. and other units up the mountain, near the summit. While further on the left of the Confederate line we find a portion of Colonel averell's regiment, 20th Va. Colonel commanding, Kessler's Battalion, 23rd Va., Major Blessing; four companies Derrick's battalion, a portion of the 22nd Va. Infentry. Some of these units have been twice named because as the fighting became more severe on the Confederate left, they reasened their right by sending reinforcements to strengthen their left.

The forces engaged in the battle were composed of twelve confederate units regiments, battalions and independent companies.

hat turned the tide of battle was the neglect of the Confederate General to fortify his position and protect his flunk. Averell, an officer of superior ability, took advantage of the situation and turned the flank of the enemy with his infantry and gave them such a slight margin for their escape which caused much confusion.

all that saved the Confederates from being cut off was the lake that protected their left flank. Troops from West Virginia, Virginia, Ohio and Pennsylvania took part in the battle.

The Battle of Droop Mountain was fought November 6th, 1763 between Union Forces, commanded by Brig. Gen. William W. Averell, U. S. Army, and confederates troops under the command of Drig. Gen. John Echols, C. S. Army.

One of the reasons for the meeting of these two forces in Test Virginia at this time was; The western part of Virginia was tribulted by people who were in favor of the Union, so June 20th, 1667 the cld state of Virginia became divided into Virginia and .nat Tirrinia.

Confederate troops then were sent into the newly formed st its so as to harass the Union troops in that vicinity, also to treas dom. the normle of the people who had left the old state of free to the Contact Troops were very successful. They occupied the reserver Willey with Sendenarters at Lewisburg. The road I. at lents, are wis 'nion to the Virginia border was the only availatte that to deal man consider and had the Union troops who ... . ... . ... ... ... ... ... Eleten and near Charleston separated.

In The Two Virginias. A DETRIMINED EFFORT TO SETTLE THE LONG PENDING DERT QUESTION. According to a statement of Mr. James M. Mason, of Charlestown, W. Va., who claims upply of to be of counsel, a syndicate of English and such as Tables, American holders of Virginia certificates has cs, Cane been formed to make a bold dash for the setthare of flement of the debt question between the 12-tf. Virginias. The first step is to be the securement of a stating of account between the two States to ascertain the equitable share of ly pur-West Virginia's portion of the debt. This abovebeing a controversy between two States, Mr. Mason says the Federal Supreme Court has exclusive jurisdiction, and everybody will be orns of entistied with the decision. Mr. Mason, who tricous is now in Wheeling, gives the following as to the present movement: atron-"The creditors co-operate to bring about Stel. a settlement. They appoint an agent, who will accept what is paid by West Virginia .--۲, The State of Virginia will institute to the Suors. preme Court a friendly suit for a settlement ., against West Virginia. The court will order commissioners (who will probably be selected by the two States) to state an account, and a judgment will be rendered against West Virginia in favor of Virginia for the balance ascertamed to be due. TS. The certificates are to be pooled. It is simply a common contrivauce to create the necessary agency without tying up the certilicates. The certificates are lodged with a t stakeholder, under a contract, which defines the power and duty of the agent, and the stakeholder issues for each certificate a negotiable receipt. We distinguish between the security and its owner. The agent represente the owner, whosoever he may be .-The receipt passes from hand to hand pre-Э cisely as the certificate would do, and it carries notice to every subsequent holder that | w the certificate has been subjected to the terms of the contract. lon There is nothing to conceal. The more the the public knows the better we will be pleased. Soutler & Co., of 78 Broadway, represent the creditors. This house was established by James T. Soutler. He was the president of the Bank of Norfolk, and went to New York many years before the war to 00 become president of the Bank of the Re-IΓ. public and the agent of Virginia to negotiate her loans. The certificates will be deposited with the Farmers' Loan and Trust Company, CÔ one of the oldest and most respectable in-004 elitutions in this country." W Mr. Mason further shys the present Legislature of West Virginia will be asked for achi tion in the matter. He says there is no speculation in the matter; that it is conducted publicly and under the supervision of committees composed of goatlemen of the highest social and business standing, who have been selected by the London and WI American holders of the certificates. of by. ## LYNCHINGS in POCAHONTAS COUNTY

There have been no lynchings in the county for two generations and the three that we have record of took place during the Civil war. The following is taken from the Pocahontas Times for January 25, 1902, and was written by Calvin Price.

In January 1862, a colored man belonging to John W. Warwick was taken by a mob, from the jail in nuntersville, and hanged ton a tree.

homes and shot near the roadside. Their bodys were found next day.

I have sent something in on this before!

Jan. 22. He was found rebruary 9. He left a widow and eight small children, the youngest a daughter of two years, who sickened and died with dyptheria about the day her father was found. They were buried in the same grave.

Two of his grandaughters, Mrs. C. H. Kellison and Mrs.

Lanty underwood sent me a poem written some years after by Mary Ann Alderman and here it is.

Attend dear friends, while we relate

A sad and solemn story;

How treacherous fields and bloody men

Nith hearts and hands all gory,

Murdered a Christian Union man
And called it all for good.

All wicked men did shun;

they took him from his happy home.

And those he loved so dear, No more to see their smiling faces nor their sweet voices hear.

They took him just three miles from home,
Along the darksome way;
And there the murderers murdered him,
Down in a field he lay.

For three long weeks in hopeless woe,
Friends searched for him in vain;
When lo, one stormy winters eve
They him beheld again.

Yes, there the loving father lay the murdered man was found; his face was buried in the snow, And frozen to the ground.

And there was laid to rest;

no more to be with those he loved.

But he was with the blessed.

To mourn their wretched lot;

A husband and a friend,
A father to the orphan child
And aid and comfort lend.

Then weep no more, ye mourning friends,

But ask to be forgiven;

Then you may meet the one you love

The rosebud now is bursting forth,
Around that peasful spot;
Where slumbers his moulded frame,

Civil War

Shortly after the Civil War a political orator waved the bloody flag at Edray and urged the people to vote the way they had shot. Rev. John anugh replied to him something like this: "The war is over. It is our duty to promote peace. I had a son in the Confederate army and I had a son in the Union army. If the hostilities continue, the factions will be holding their backet dinners in different hollows."

This was the last effort on the part of any speaker to make a bloody flag speech in this county.

From 1926 W. Va. Blue Book

* (red) The Civil War marked the division line in this county between the old and the new. The thinking on in the county were especially interested in the 1870 in introducing a pliances that the soldiers had observed on their campaigns. This was the line of demarkation between the sickle and the grain cradle, the flintlock rifls and the repeating rifle, the introduction of the steam ergine and the portable sawmill to take the place of the water turned mill, kerosene lamps for candle light.

M. A. Friel of near Clover Lick owned the first kerosene lamp eyer in the county in 1865.

But more than anything else that spurred the business men of Pocahontae County was the success of James E. A. Gibbs, of Marlinton, the after the Civil War found he was rich because of the success of a chain stitch sewing machine he had invented just before the war.

The older citizens of today have seen the adoption of such things as the steam engine, sewing machine (1872), turbine wheel, telephone (1898), printing ships (1982) bend mills, and many more. On the other hand, during this period, we lost a great tany skilled workmen such as candlemakers, farriers, shoemakers, weavers, spinners, tallers, herneasmakers, saddlers, stonemasons and the like. This was especially true after the covered wagons began to make regular trips to bring in freight form Will-this tile our natural resources were practically untouched. Agriculture and grazing of live stock were the chief industires.

e(green) Agriculture was the chief pursuit of the early settlers of Pocahontas county. Because travel was difficult and transportation facilities were meager, the settlers were compelled to be practically self sustaining. Gardening, together with the growing of small patches of buckwheat, corn, beans, and potatoes, largely constituted the early farming enterprises. Later cattle, sheep, and hogs were introduced principally for milds wood and meat to supplement the supply of wild game and fish that was an important source of food and clothing. Trapping furnished furs and skins that could be traded for the few supplies not produced at home. The bottom lands were generally devoted to grean and hay, and the adjacent slopes were cleared and used for pasture. The land has always been farmed, for the most part, in small tracts by the owners. Few slaves were owned and the freeing of them did not affect agriculture.

The total acreage in all grains has remained fairly constant since 1890, but acreage in certain crops have fluctuated considerably. Corn has been in the lead at all times followed by eather wheat or cays. Hay increased from 10,817 acres in 1879 to 15,138 acres in 1889 and has increased very little since, but the acre yield has been more than doubled. Since 1900 the total number of hogs and cattle has dropped off slightly, but the number of sheep raised and the production of wool, dairy products, poultry and eggs have increased considerably. The acreage occupied by potatoes and garden crops hetween 1880 and 1910 the number of farms steadily increased from 682 to 1,198, the latter figure being only 3 below that given by the 1930 census report. As the size of the farms has decreased slightly in the last 50 years, the total amount of land in far a first reserved fairly constant.

Soon after transportation facilities became available the land owners brought in mowing machines, reapers, buggy rakes and wagons, but on the land owners brought in mowing machines, reapers, buggy rakes and wagons, but on the smaller patch farms and on steep or stony lands, much of the work was still done the smaller patch farms and on steep or stony lands, much of the work was still done the smaller patch farms and continues to even today.

defended by Arthur Dayton. Ar. Eayton also successfully defended many other confederate soldiers who where indicted for murder after the Civil War in Pocahontas County.

Pocahontas Times -- July 9, 1931.

They talk about the days of Reconstruction as being frying times. In my openopm the days of reconstruction dating from 1867 to the Reconstruction Act were not half so perilous to the continuance of the country as the two years from 1865-1867.

Here on the home farm, five sons showed up in 1865, and one had perished in the war. The instant need of things were rail fences, live stock, and a crop of corn. Like most soldiers all they asked or hoped for was a chance to got to work again. Instead they felt that they were under the shadow of serving time in prison for treason.

From- Pocahontas Times- Jan 16, 1930 By, Calvin Price. He has reference to the Price family - his father and five uncles.

In many families none of the sons beturned as was the case in the Poage Sending. They sont two sons into the service, both were killed. From the Conject family there were five sons enlisted. Two, George and Robert were killed. I was lost an arm and the other two were wounded. Their names were John and Danies. All so it was with so many of the families.

Pocahontas Times -- July 9, 1931.

They talk about the days of Reconstruction as being frying times. In my openopm the days of reconstruction dating from 1867 to the Reconstruction Act were not half so perilous to the continuance of the country as the two years from 1865-1867.

Here on the home farm, five sons showed up in 1865, and one had perished in the war. The instant need of things were rail fences, live stock, and a crop of corn. Like most soldiers all they asked or hoped for was a chance to git to work again. Instead they felt that they were under the shadow of serving time in prison for treason.

From- Pocahontas Times- Jan 16, 1930 By, Calvin Price. He has reference to the Price family - his father and five uncles.

In many families none of the sons beturned as was the case in the Poage Semily. They sent two sons into the service, both were killed. From the Semily there were five sons enlisted. Two, George and Robert were killed. Semily there were five sons enlisted. Two, George and Robert were killed. Semily the sons and the other two were wounded. Their names were John and Charles. All so it was with so many of the families.

I am sending you a list of the Old Soldiers of the Civil War I have been very careful in making up this list of the Companies, this is a record that is hard to find, in fact part of it is not in the records perfectly as I have it written up . One of the old Sodiere of Pocchontes kept a Diary the Company "G " which he had printed a few years ago. And many of the facts that he had secured in his record are not in the Archives . And a few of the facts of the Records in the Archives mention a few things the Diary of the Old Soldier don't have .

Fpy placing the two together they will coincide perfectly with the U.S. History This Roster of the Company "G" of the 31st Virginia Regiment is as near Authentic as any person of this generation can make it.

These soldiers were not pensioned or rewarded like the rest of the service were of great peril and importance. They have in service about fourteen months.

In April 1864 the state guards were organized and took charge of the danger zone in West Virginia and in May 1864 the entire force of the re-lar arry of West Virginia was on the move into Virginia to report to Teneral Hunter at Staunton. From that time to the end of the war this regular army fought east of the mountains.

The policy of West Virginia during the last year of the war was siven over entirely to the state guards. Yet they have been ignored. 1st of the southern states have taken very good care of destitute innern veterans. But very few of these from Pocahontas ever received a reasion.

NANCY HART THE CONFEDERATE SPY SPENT HER LAST DAYS IN POUGHONTAS COUNTY

In Roane County, during the Civil war, was a band of Guerillas who were not regular soldiers and to this band belonged Perry Connelly. Many deaths were blamed to him and it became a matter of prime importance with the union forces to get rid of Connelly. To this same band belonged wancy Hart. She was a girl in her twenties, black cyed, of medium height, of modern education, very active and very beautiful. She was a Confederate bred in the bone. She was the eyes of this local army. Connelly's death caused the little army to disintergate and the soldiers found their way into the regular Confederate army, but Nancy Hart continued to be of great service to the army as a spy.

She was captured and held as a spy in the jail at summersville. After a time the soldiers guarding her grew careless and underestimated the danger of their charge. She was allowed some freedom about the jail yard, and she talked freely to the soldiers. One night she approached one of the continues and engaged him in conversation. She was allowed to examine a pistol that he carried. When she secured the pistol the whot him and made her oscape. She fled to the mountain will proper and she was not taken again.

namely Hart married Joshua Douglas, and they settled in the great mountain wilderness around the head of Spring Creek and but for one more tragedy she rounded out a peaceful and contented life in her mountain home.

In 1880 the country rang with the news of the killin of Thomas Reed by Kenos Douglas. Douglas lay in a laurel patch for five weeks in the dead of winter, but was captured and given a life sentence. Kenos was a son of Joshua and Nancy Hart Douglas. This is the story of a heroine of the Civil War.

THE COLLING OF JAMES HENRY G. WILSON TO MARLINTON

About the year 1894, the Prices one day received a letter from dilson in England saying he was just out of college, of athletic turn, with a thousand pounds capital, and would like to obtain footing in the United States. They wrote him to:

Lone and see for himself. About the first of September he came with his boxes, driving through from Belington in a spring magon he had chartered there; a little drive of 70 miles.

Le had lost his way and suffered exhaustion. The right way tould have been to come to Millboro, Va. where he could have gotten here in 46 miles and his boxes would have come by cover in the trains that ran summer and winter.

But he found comfortable quarters and an understanding of the He even found a countryman already stopping here. The first evening they made a bet. Federal line of rail communication from east to west. They were on the Hanawha River at the mouth of Gauley there was another small force of Federals under the command of General A. N. Inffie, with the mission of preventing a Confederate movement limm the Hanawha towards the Dhio River.

Feliminary Operations

occupied the northern reaches of the valley. When he learned that Averell was marching down the valley, General Echols proceeded to Droop Mountain with his main body, while he took up a defensive position with the idea of providing a rallying point for his advanced troops which were being driven back by the Federals, there to make a stand and stop the further advance of Averell. A line of breastworks and gun positions was constructed across the main road, which we now know as the "Seneca Trail" (Route 219) where it crosses the mountain.

Apparently General Echols had learned of the approach of General Duffie's force coming east from Gauley Bridge but left no considerable force at Lewisburg to oppose him. Averell's main body arrived in the vicinity of Hillsboro on the evening of November 4th. They established their outposts close to the foot of Droop Mountain and started immediately with the reconnaissance of the Confederate position. The entire day of November 5 was consumed in this reconnaissance, which developed the fact that the position was too strong to be taken to direct assault. There was a lot of skirmishing during the day and that evening General.

The Battle

Larly on the morning of November 6, 1865, General Averell disjutched a force of about 1100 men composed of the 18th Chio is try and the 14th Pennsylvania Cavalry to march west and south the Levelie road, a detour of six miles, to attack the left talk and rear of the Confederate position on Droop Mountain. He also sent a small detachment out to the east to demonstrate against the right flank of the Confederate position, Teneral Fehols was content to defend his strong position on the rountain and apparently had no information that a federal force was approaching on his left flank.

At 1:45 p m, just when the skirmishing along the front was at its height, the Federal right flanking detachment broke in on the left flank and rear of the Confederate position, Averell pushed forward his assault up the mountain on the front and the left flanking detachment closed in. Echols threw in part of his reserves to stem the tide and for a short period of time there was some desperate fighting on top of the mountain. Seeing that the Federal right flank force was closing in on his rear in an endeavor to gain the read to Levisburg, Echols sent in the last of his reserves and the troops he could withdraw from the main position to counter The succeeded in doing so and managed to withdraw his and get it on the road to Lewisburg. By four o'clock a the afternoon his troops were on the road in more or less orderly filtion are covered by an organized rear guard which covered the on the forenoon of November 7, just as Duffie's advance

Decisive Battle

The Battle of Droop Mountain was a decisive battle in that it expelled the Confederates from that section of West Virginia and from them on to the end of the war between the states, West Virginia was Federal territory.

In his report of the battle, General Echols states: "My artillery and trains were brought safely through with the exception of one brass howitzer belonging to Chapman's battery which troke down completely during the retreat and had to be left, this iffering the enemy the only trophy of which they can "boast."

This cannon is supposed to have been buried in the swamp on Droop Tintain, and although diligent search has been made it has not get been found. It is hoped that it will be located in due time.

In the course of the conflict, Colonel James Cochran, commanier of the 14th Virginia cavalry, was surrounded by a squad of Union soldiers and apparently doomed to capture. By some means, newver, he managed to excape. Later in relating the story, he had asked why, under the circumstances, he did not surrender, he cochran replied: "If they had said 'Colonel, surrender' have done so. But they said, 'stop, you blankety-blank

About 150 years ago John Yeager came to the upper Greenbrier Valley from Pennsylvania near Lancaster. He settled on the East Fork of Greenbrier River at Travellers Reposs. He took many thousands of acres in what was known as the German settlement. Among the neighbors were John Slaven, Abraham Burner, Moses Ecuchin, and Abraham Arbogast.

One of the sons of John Yeager, who married a Hull, was Andrew who married Elizabeth Dilley. Along in the 1820's Andrew came into the homestead, Travellers Repose. In 1861 he refugeed to Highland County, and the tavern house was burned by the Federal troops from Indiana regiments under General Milroy, camped on Shavers Cheat Mountain. The same year Andrew Yeager died of typhoid fever in Highland County. Peter D. Yeager, the son of Andrew, was a Confederate soldier. He spent a long time as a prisoner of war at Camp Chase, Ohio. Upon his return from prison he restored in a large measure the pioneer home and tavern.

The Postoffice Department in 1856 wrote a letter of complaint to Jim Trotter, etage coach driver, over his delay in getting the mail across Cheat Mountain west of Travelers Repose. His terse reply was in these words: If the gable end of hell would blow out and rain fire and brimstone for forty days and forty nights it would not be sufficient to melt the snow drifts on Cheat Mountain.

Louise McNeill has written poems about this incident and about Travellers Repose. I quote them here merely to show how well she describes real incidents in her native Pocahontas. These of course could not be published with out permission.
